26 PLAINTIFFS' REPLY IN SUPPORT
 27 OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR 28 PERMANENT INJUNCTION

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

In the Motion (ECF 71), Plaintiffs seek a permanent injunction to enjoin and restrain defendant Alexey Kondratiev (“Kondratiev”), and anyone acting on his behalf or in concert with him, from registering, maintaining, and/or administering any domain name or website that utilizes or incorporates the Boyko Mark or Mr. Boyko’s name.¹ In support of that Motion, Plaintiffs made sufficient showing to satisfy each element required for the issuance of a permanent injunction.

Kondratiev’s Response to the Motion (the “Opposition”) neither cites any legal authority nor addresses any of the elements of a permanent injunction, with the exception of “irreparable harm,” as to which Kondratiev mistakes both the law and the applicable burden of proof, as discussed below. Instead, Kondratiev uses his Opposition as yet another opportunity to attack Mr. Boyko and to try to relitigate Kondratiev’s “liability” on the underlying cybersquatting claim, which has already been decided. Rather than engage with Kondratiev’s meritless allegations against Boyko, which even Kondratiev previously admitted are “irrelevant” to the merits of the relief requested (see ECF 23 at 8:1-3), Plaintiffs instead will address the actual elements of a permanent injunction.

First, the only element of the permanent injunction that Kondratiev even attempts to challenge is “irreparable harm,” by arguing that Plaintiffs failed to prove “any damages.” ECF 73 at 2. However, Kondratiev mistakes the law, as it is his burden to rebut the presumption that Plaintiffs suffered “irreparable harm” due to his cybersquatting violations – for which he has already been found liable by this Court. See 15 U.S.C. § 1116(a). Further, in any case, it is black letter law that damage to goodwill or business reputation constitutes irreparable harm, which cannot be compensated with monetary damages.

Second, Kondratiev does not challenge, and therefore concedes, Plaintiffs' showing that (i) Plaintiffs have already succeeded on the merits of their cybersquatting claim; (ii) the ¹ All capitalized terms herein have the same meaning as in the underlying Motion, unless otherwise indicated. All emphasis herein is added, unless otherwise indicated.

1 balance of hardships favors injunctive relief; and (iii) the public interest would not be 2 disserved by a permanent injunction. Indeed, Plaintiffs have squarely met their burden as to 3 each of those elements. See Motion, at §§ III.A-D; see also infra, Reply, at §§ III.A-C.

4 Lastly, Kondratiev admits in the Opposition his clear and present intent to cybersquat
 5 in the future by utilizing and employing Boyko's name and/or the Boyko Mark. See ECF 73
 6 at 10 (arguing that an injunction prohibiting "creating a website that utilizes or in any way
 7 employs Mr. Boyko's name or the Boyko Mark" would somehow infringe on Kondratiev's
 8 first amendment rights). To state the obvious, Kondratiev does not have a first amendment 9 right to engage in cybersquatting. Thus, Kondratiev's own Opposition proves the need for 10 permanent injunctive relief in this case.

11 II. EVIDENTIARY OBJECTIONS TO KONDRATIEV'S OPPOSITION

12 First, as a threshold matter, Exhibits A-I are entirely irrelevant to the disposition of 13 Plaintiffs' Motion. Kondratiev offers Exhibits A-I in an effort to demonstrate that Plaintiffs 14 are not entitled to a permanent injunction because the Infringing Website's contents are 15 purportedly true and, therefore, cannot tarnish or disparage the Boyko Mark. (Opp. at 2-9)
 16 But this Court has already found Kondratiev liable for violating 15 U.S.C. § 1125(d)(1), 17 including that the Infringing Website was "dedicated to publishing disparaging 18 information about Boyko." ECF 67 at 9-10. This alone should end the analysis, as 19 "[i]rrelevant evidence is not admissible." Fed. R. Evid. 402.²

20 Second, the Declaration of Alexey Kondratiev ("Kondratiev Declaration") contains 21 demonstrably false statements. Specifically, Kondratiev states in his declaration that 22 Exhibits A-F were purportedly "downloaded on May 26, 2025" "from links from [the] 23 website <olegvboyko.website>." Kondratiev Decl., ¶ 2. But this website was not accessible
 24 to the public on May 26, 2025, or at any time after Plaintiffs filed their Motion on May 19,

25
 26 ² In any event, the truth or falsity of the information on the Infringing Website is irrelevant
 27 to the injunction inquiry (ECF 60 at 15 n.7), and Kondratiev conceded as much in his earlier
 28 filings. See, e.g., ECF 23 at 8:1-3 [Kondratiev's Response to Motion for Preliminary Injunction] ("the dispute regarding the contents of <olegvboyko.website> is irrelevant, since this legal action is for cybersquatting and not for defamation").

1 2025, as the Infringing Website was taken down after it was transferred to Plaintiffs
 2 following this Court’s entry of summary judgment in Plaintiffs’ favor. See Declaration of 3 David Beddingfield, attached as Exhibit A, at ¶¶ 4-6 & Ex. 1. Thus, these exhibits are 4 unauthenticated and fail to satisfy the requirements of Fed. Rules of Evidence 901-903.
 5 Exhibit G is also unauthenticated, and fails to satisfy Fed. R. Evid. 901-903.

6 Third, Exhibits A-G and I contain out-of-court statements, made by largely 7 unidentified non-parties, offered for their truth. This is inadmissible hearsay without 8 statutory exception. Fed. R. Evid. 801-803. As such, these exhibits are inadmissible for the 9 purpose for which they are being offered.

10 Lastly, even if the exhibits attached to his declaration were admissible, Kondratiev
 11 blatantly misstates the content of those exhibits. For example, Kondratiev falsely claims
 12 that Boyko is listed in a Report to Congress as a “potential target for US sanctions.” ECF 73
 13 at 3:7-9. But the document Kondratiev cites (Exhibit C to his Declaration) actually expressly 14 states that it is “not a sanctions list,” and that an individuals’ inclusion on that list does not 15 “indicate that the US Government has information about the individual’s involvement in 16 malign activities.” ECF 73-1, at 12 of 44.

17 III. PLAINTIFFS ARE ENTITLED TO A PERMANENT INJUNCTION

18 As explained in the Motion, the standard for granting a permanent injunction is 19 essentially the same as for a preliminary injunction, except that the party seeking a 20 permanent injunction must prove actual success on the merits, as opposed to merely showing
 21 a likelihood of success. See Amoco Prod. Co. v. Vill. of Gambell, 480 U.S. 531, 546 n.12
 22 (1987). Thus, a plaintiff seeking a permanent injunction must demonstrate that:

- 23 (1) it has suffered an irreparable injury;
- 24 (2) remedies available at law, such as monetary damages, are inadequate to compensate for that injury;
- 25 (3) considering the balance of hardships between the plaintiff and defendant, a remedy in equity is warranted; and
- 26 (4) the public interest would not be disserved by a permanent injunction.

1 eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, LLC, 547 U.S. 388, 391 (2006). Here, Plaintiffs have made a 2 sufficient showing to satisfy each of the above elements.

3 A. Plaintiffs Have Succeeded on the Merits of Their Cybersquatting Claim

4 On March 13, 2025, this Court entered an order (dated March 12, 2025) finding
 5 Kondratiev liable to Plaintiffs under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(d)(1). See ECF 67 at 10. It is well
 6 settled that a grant of summary judgment in favor of plaintiff on liability issues constitutes 7 actual success on the merits for the purposes of adjudicating a request for the entry of a
 8 permanent injunction. See, e.g., Blizzard Entm't Inc. v. Ceiling Fan Software LLC, 28 F.
 9 Supp. 3d 1006, 1018, n. 13 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 23, 2013) (“Because the Court has granted 10 summary judgment in favor of [plaintiff], [plaintiff] has not only a likelihood of success on 11 the merits but also actual success on the merits of its claims.”).

12 B. Plaintiffs Have Suffered Irreparable Injury; and Monetary Damages
 13 Alone Are Inadequate to Compensate Plaintiffs for That Injury.

14 First, as explained in the Motion, 15 U.S.C. § 1116(a) provides that a cybersquatting 15 plaintiff “shall be entitled to a rebuttable presumption of irreparable harm upon a 16 finding of a violation [of, inter alia, 15 U.S.C. § 1125(d)] in the case of a motion for a
 17 permanent injunction.” See also Rylee & Cru, Inc. v. Hui Zhu, 2024 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
 18 85480, at *11 (D. Colo. May 10, 2024) (“Because the Court has found that www.rylee-
 19 cru.com is in violation of the ACPA, R&C is entitled to the presumption of irreparable 20 harm.”); M.I.B. Grp. LLC v. Aguilar, 2024 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 126132, at *66 (C.D. Cal. Jul.
 21 16, 2024) (accord); Whaleco Inc. v. Temuapp.me, 2024 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96893, at *25 (D.
 22 Az. May 31, 2024) (accord).

23 “The presumption of irreparable harm” in Section 1116(a) “acts as a procedural 24 device which places the burden of production on the question of irreparable harm onto 25 the” non-movant. Vital Pharms. v. PHD Mktg., 2021 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 254038, at *13
 26 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2021); see also Travel Gig, LLC v. Sharing Servs. Global Corp., 2022
 27 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 221813, *18 (D. Mont. Dec. 8, 2022) (“the burden is on Defendants to 28 overcome Plaintiffs’ rebuttable presumption”).

1 Here, Kondratiev failed to meet this burden of proof, as his only argument is that 2 Plaintiffs failed to show “any damages.” See gen. ECF 73. But even if that were true (it is 3 not), Kondratiev’s argument is insufficient as a matter of law, because a non-movant 4 “cannot flip the burden by asserting [that the movant] has not provided evidence of 5 harm.” Longbridge Fin., LLC v. Mut. of Omaha Mortg., Inc., 2025 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91179, 6 at *39 (May 13, 2025). Rather, “[b]ecause a presumption of harm exists, either [the non-7 movant] must provide evidence that [the movant] did not suffer irreparable harm or [the 8 movant] must concede the absence of such harm.” Id. Here, neither has occurred.

9 Second, in any case, “loss of control over business reputation and damage to 10 goodwill constitute[s] irreparable harm.” Adidas Am., Inc. v. Skechers USA, Inc., 890
 11 F.3d 747, 756 (9th Cir. 2018) (cites omitted). “Intangible injuries, such as loss of goodwill,
 12 are irreparable because quantifying their harm is, in most cases, impractical or impossible, 13 and, as a result, such injuries cannot be fully remedied with a financial award.” Skydive
 14 Ariz., Inc. v. Quattrocchi, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49972, at *5 (D. Ariz. Apr. 26, 2010).

15 Here, this Court has already repeatedly found that the Infringing “Website is 16 dedicated to publishing disparaging information about Boyko.” See ECF 14 [TRO], at 17 2:5-9, 3:14-17; ECF 35 [Order Granting Preliminary Injunction], at 4; ECF 67 [Order
 18 granting partial summary judgment], at 10:1-3. Such harm cannot be adequately
 19 compensated by monetary damages. See, e.g., Skydive Ariz., Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
 20 49972, at *5 (“Injuries to goodwill and business reputation are generally considered to be 21 intangible and, as a result, irreparable.”) Thus, even if Plaintiffs had the burden to prove 22 irreparable harm (they do not under § 1116(a)), Plaintiffs met any such burden here through 23 their showing that Kondratiev used the Infringing Website to tarnish and disparage the 24 Boyko Mark. See ECF 67, at 9-10.

25 Third, Kondratiev argues that, because the allegations on the Infringing Website were 26 purportedly true, they cannot harm Plaintiffs. But that is the same argument this Court has 27 already rejected on summary judgment, when finding that the Infringing Website was 28 dedicated to tarnish and disparage the Boyko Mark. See ECF 61 at 8-10; ECF 67 at 9-10.

1 Further, in any case, the truth or falsity of the contents of the Infringing Website is irrelevant
 2 to whether a permanent injunction should issue. This is because even true statements can
 3 be disparaging. See, e.g., USA Techs., Inc. v. Tirpak, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72318, at *9
 4 (E.D. Pa. May 24, 2012) (explaining that “[t]ruth is not the test” as to “whether … statements
 5 constitute ‘disparaging’ remarks”); Orchestratehr, Inc. v. Trombetta, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
 6 179784, at *25 (N.D. Tx. July 15, 2015) (“[e]ven true disparaging comments could be 7 relevant evidence as to a business disparagement claim”).

8 Fourth, Kondratiev argues that (i) because Plaintiffs have not shown any 9 “quantifiable injury, no compensation for such injury should be granted, and (ii) statutory 10 damages would be sufficient to compensate Plaintiffs. (Opp. at 9). Leaving aside the clear
 11 illogic of this argument, it fails for the same reasons as Kondratiev’s “no irreparable harm”
 12 argument. It is black letter law that damage to business reputation and good will cannot be 13 compensated with purely monetary damages. See, e.g., Adidas Am., Inc., 890 F.3d at 756;
 14 Skydive Ariz., Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49972, at *5. Thus, monetary damages alone
 15 would not be sufficient to compensate Plaintiffs here, which is why injunctive relief is 16 necessary.

17 Lastly, Kondratiev’s own Opposition illustrates that a permanent injunction is 18 necessary, as Kondratiev argues that he possesses a first amendment right to register new 19 infringing domains and websites designed to tarnish and disparage the Boyko Mark. See 20 ECF 73 at 10:16-22 (arguing that “[t]he proposed [preliminary injunction] Order…
 21 significantly restrict[s] Kondratiev’s freedom of speech” because it “would prohibit the 22 Defendant from creating a website that … employs Mr. Boyko’s name or the Boyko Mark.”).
 23 Thus, Kondratiev has made clear his intent to engage in further cybersquatting by 24 registering new domains and linked websites using the Boyko Mark, so as to continue his 25 vendetta against Boyko.

26 To state the obvious, Kondratiev does not have a first amendment right to engage in 27 further cybersquatting by using or incorporating the Boyko Mark in any new domain names.
 28 Such threats of future infringement demonstrate the inadequacy of monetary damages and

1 the need for permanent injunctive relief. See, e.g., Diaz v. Bautista, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
 2 199324, at *9 (C.D. Cal. June 29, 2012) (“Monetary damages are inadequate … because,
 3 although Defendants contend they are no longer infringing, there is nothing to prevent 4 Defendants from future infringing activity unless [plaintiff] brings another lawsuit.”).

5 C. Kondratiev Does Not Dispute Any of the Other Elements for a Permanent 6 Injunction.

7 “It is a well-settled principle that by failing to address arguments in an opposition, a 8 party effectively concedes a claim.” Deasy v. N. Ariz. Healthcare Corp., 2024 U.S. Dist.
 9 LEXIS 100343, at *27 (D. Ariz. June 5, 2024); see also Vestis LLC v. Caramel Sales, Ltd.,
 10 2020 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45518, at *6-7 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 19, 2020) (accord).

11 Here, as discussed above, Plaintiffs have already demonstrated success on the merits.
 12 See infra, at § III.A. Kondratiev also does not argue that Plaintiffs have failed to establish 13 (i) that the balance of hardships favors injunctive relief; and (ii) that the public interest would 14 not be disserved by a permanent injunction. Thus, Kondratiev also concedes (as he must) 15 that Plaintiffs have met their burden as to these elements for permanent injunctive relief.

16 First, Plaintiffs have demonstrated that the balance of equities weighs in their favor 17 because a “[d]efendant ‘faces no hardship’ from refraining from its willful
 18 cybersquatting and otherwise unlawful activity.” Sleep No. Corp. v. Unknown Party, 2023
 19 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 75363, at *11 (D. Ariz. Mar. 17, 2023) (cites omitted); *AECOM Energy
 20 & Constr., Inc. v. Morrison Knudsen*, 48 Fed. App’x 115, 120 (9th Cir. 2018) (same). This 21 is because, in a cybersquatting action, “[t]he balance of hardships [] weighs heavily in favor
 22 of” the plaintiff, which “has a strong interest in being protected from [d]efendants’ illegal
 23 conduct that continues to harm its reputation and goodwill.” Yuga Labs, Inc. v. Ripps, 2023
 24 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 192487, at *46 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 25, 2023).

25 In contrast, if a permanent injunction is not granted, given Kondratiev’s long history
 26 of conflict with the Plaintiffs, and his stated intent to continue to create new websites using 27 the Boyko Mark to attack Mr. Boyko and tarnish the Boyko Mark (see ECF 73 at 10),
 28 Plaintiffs will clearly be harmed. See, e.g., Diaz v. Bautista, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 199324,

1 at *9 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (“The balance of hardship favors [plaintiff] because if Defendants are 2 not enjoined, [plaintiff] will be forced to sue if her rights are again violated.”)

3 Second, the “public interest” element also weighs in favor of granting injunctive 4 relief, as the public has an interest in avoiding confusion between marks and in preventing 5 cybersquatting. See, e.g., Skydive Ariz., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49972, at *11 (“the public,
 6 not just the private litigant, is harmed by an inadequate response to trademark infringement
 7 or other Lanham Act violations.”); Tartell v. S. Fla. Sinus & Allergy Ctr., Inc., 2013 U.S.
 8 Dist. LEXIS 191404, at *33 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 25, 2013) (“[I]t is in the public interest to enforce 9 the trademark laws against cybersquatting[.]”).

10 IV. CONCLUSION

11 For the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons set forth in the Motion, Plaintiffs 12 respectfully request that the Court enter an Order permanently enjoining and restraining 13 defendant Alexey Kondratiev from registering, maintaining, and/or administering any 14 domain name or website that utilizes or incorporates the Boyko Mark, Mr. Boyko’s name, 15 or any other word, term, or name confusingly similar to the Boyko Mark.
